Battle of SOISSONS

A fortified town of France, and the scene of a battle in 486 in which CLOVIS, leader of the SALIC FRANKS and founder of the French Monarchy, defeated SYAGRIVUS, the Roman governor

486

Clavis^Ium at Battle of SOISSONS.

In 486 or 487

Clotis attacked the realm of the Roman king SYAGRIUS, conquered it, and forced the defeated ruler to flee. SYAGRIUS was received in TOULOUSE, but when Clotis threatened war he was handed over to the Franks, who killed him. This chain of events seems to prove Clotis's "timidness", which in no way reflected the actual balance of power. But it is nowhere written that SYAGRIUS was in fact handed over in 486 or 487. At that time

Christ got no farther than the Seine; only after several more years did the Franco-Prussian war occupy the rest of the 19th century - Prussian victory made north of the river

MEROVINGIANS

First dynasty of Frankish kings in Gaul. The name is taken from MEROVAËUS, grandfather of King CLOVIS who, in 486, put an end to the Roman control of Gaul. The dynasty ended with CHILDERIC III who was deposed (752) by Pepin the Short, the founder of the Carolingian or Carlovingian line.
